

BAKRADZJE, K. Sjistjema i metod ffilosofiji Gjeggjela. Tbjiljis: Izdatjeljstvo Tbjiljisskovo Gosudarstvjenno Unjiviersijtjeta, 1958. 463 pp. n. p.
—A general introduction to Hegel's philosophic system and dialectical method, from the perspective of Engels, Marx and Lenin. — R. D. G.

BARTH, K. Protestant Thought: From Rousseau to Ritschl, trans. B. Cozens. New York: Harper and Brothers, 1959. 435 pp. $7.00—A translation of eleven of the chapters of Die Protestantische Theologie im 19. Jahrhundert. Omits chapters on the minor Protestant theologians of the 19th century who are far more representative of Protestant thought than some of the more famous ones included. Also omitted are the chapters on theology and on Protestant theology in the 18th century. Enough, though, is left to make this a very stimulating book. Barth is usually entertaining and at times, brilliant. — K. H.

* Books received will be acknowledged in this section by a brief résumé, report, or criticism. Such acknowledgment does not preclude more detailed examination in a subsequent Critical Study. The Summaries and Comments will be written by the Managing Editor and her staff of assistants, with the occasional help of others. Reports have been contributed to this issue by Richard J. Bernstein, Richard DeGeorge, John Lachs, Tsu-Lin Mei, and Donald W. Sherburne.

Review of Metaphysics
12/59

12/59