

Division into five volumes has resulted in a more durable set. In addition, pages now tend to lie flat. Inside margins are very narrow reducing the possibilities of rebinding.

In its second edition the Worldmark Encyclopedia of the Nations continues to fulfill its stated purpose. Although indexing is unsatisfactory, illustrative material sparse and questionable, binding deficient in one respect, and the subject matter is duplicated in other well-established titles, the text has been brought up to date. However, unless it is revised more frequently than in the past, it cannot be relied upon as a source of current information. The encyclopedia is written in clear and concise language and backed by an array of authoritative sources. Its accuracy and balance of coverage for all the nations of the world are acceptable. The second edition of Worldmark Encyclopedia of the Nations is recommended within the above limitations for junior and senior high school, public, and college libraries and for individuals who have an interest in the subject matter.

Chandler, George. How to find out; a guide to sources of information for all, arranged by the Dewey decimal classification. 1964. 185p. facsims. Macmillan, paper, $2.95.

An English scholar's introductory guide to information sources is designed for high school and college students, company libraries, and curious general readers. The first in a proposed series, the present work begins with general suggestions on locating material and then briefly describes important reference books in the various Dewey classes. There is a preponderance of English and European titles but American reference books are generously represented and the book, on the whole, has a useful place in U.S. libraries and library schools.

Clapp, Verner Warren. The future of the research library. 1964. 114p. Univ. of Illinois, $4.50.

Given as the 1963 Windsor lecture in librarianship, University of Illinois Library School, Urbana, Illinois, by the president of the Council on Library Resources. Stressed is the great need for advances in the inexpensive reproduction and dissemination of information and the sharing of bibliographic resources among libraries. Specific and tentative solutions relating to these and other problems of the general research library are appended.

100-200 PHILOSOPHY—RELIGION

Barth, Karl. God here and now. Tr. by Paul M. van Buren. 1964. 108p. Harper, $3.75.

Seven addresses delivered to diverse European audiences over the past 15 years by the Swiss theologian Karl Barth are concerned with the timeliness of the Christian message, God's free grace, God's word and the decision of faith, the authority and significance of the Bible, the living church, Christian ethics, and humanism. An outstanding Protestant theologian, Barth addresses himself to scholar and attentive layman in deceptively simple prose containing much for reflection.

Bonsirven, Joseph. Palestinian Judaism in the time of Jesus Christ. Tr. from the French by William Wolf. 1964. 271p. Holt, $5.50.

Some years before his death a noted professor of New Testament studies at the Pontifical Biblical Institute in Rome completed this abridged version of his monumental exposition on the basic tenets, instructions, and practices that governed Jewish religion and life at the time of Christ. His material was gleaned and systematized from a comparative study of the Old Testament, the New Testament, Philo, Josephus, the Apocrypha, writings of the rabbis, and inscriptions and sayings of ancient authorship to clarify the

The Booklist uses the Decimal classification and the subject headings on Library of Congress cards when these are available. Classification and subject headings assigned in the Booklist office are indicated by a dagger (†). Alternative classification is given in brackets. Both the Library of Congress and the Booklist use the 16th edition of the Decimal classification in assigning numbers. Libraries may wish to modify classification and subject headings to accord with their own collections.

Parentheses () around an L.C. card number indicate an open entry card; brackets [] indicate a card for a different edition.

A (W) at the end of an entry indicates that H. W. Wilson catalog cards are available for the title.
