heard All of the sermons which are collected in this new volume were held by prisoners before ~~one of~~^a particularly astute, awake, and lively communities which rejects anything half-true and reacts favorably to anything true and honest. One can see in these sermons that they deliver nothing else than the Gospels and therefore speak to the prisoner~~x~~ as a person, who in spite of his condition and crime, has human dignity through God's grace. The special situation of the prisoner~~x~~ is not misused and taken advantage of in a wrong way. Rather, he is shown like every other man to see himself and his life, his past, present and future in the light of the Gospel. It becomes clear with these sermons how much this directing and help comes true where a man is so directly spoken to by God's word and Gospel, and not by ~~moral~~
