Dear Professor Barth,

The Faculty of Theology at this College has asked me to extend a very hearty invitation to you to deliver a short course of Lectures here in the Autumn or Spring term of Session 1931-32.

We have an active School of Theology at Bangor and it is steadily growing. In the autumn of 1928 Professor Adolph Deissmann honoured us with a visit and delivered a course of Lectures, and in the spring of this year we received a similar visit from Professor Karl Budde.

If you would do us the honour of visiting Bangor, we could arrange the Lectures at a time that would suit your convenience. The course usually consists of five or more Lectures which are normally delivered on successive days. Bangor is conveniently situated for a train journey from London, and, if you could come, I could give you details in good time as to arrangements for travelling.

The

The Faculty usually makes a payment at the rate of £10 per lecture, together with travelling expenses. We should also be glad to provide hospitality either at a hotel or privately, according as you would prefer.

The Faculty sincerely hopes that you will find it possible to accept our invitation.

I am, Believe me,

Yours sincerely,

D. Evans Evans.
