Dear Professor Barth,

I have just finished reading "Der gute Hirte"-the 10th of the series of "Theologische Existenz Heute" which I have read with great interest and appreciation from the beginning. They have enabled me to keep in touch with the situation, and also to help to guide others. From Theodor Hesse also, who spent a night with me, and with whom I have corresponded, I have also learned much.

But I look forward greatly to the possibility of seeing you personally in Bonn next month. My wife's sister now lives in Brück-Köln, and we propose to go there towards the end of July. She has also relatives still in Bonn, and I intend to spend a few days with them in Bonn. During August we shall probably go for a holiday to the Black Forest.

We shall arrive in Germany about the 24th or 25th of July, that is, I think, about a week before the summer semester ends in Bonn. I should be greatly obliged if you would let me know when you will be leaving Bonn, so that I can arrange to come to Bonn to see you before you go away. I might come either in the week on which I arrive- after the 25th - or in the following week. As I shall be staying with my wife,s relatives, any time will be convenient for me. I should like to attend your classes for a few days if you are still lecturing.

The professorship at St Andrews of which I wrote went to a younger man, Dr D.M. Baillie whom you also met in St Andrews. He is a Ritschlian in theology. My age, as I indicated, was against me. However I have been happy in the ministryy, and shall continue to be happy.

I trust that you continue to be in good health in the midst of those labours and excitements, and that your wife and family are well. I am looking forward with the greatest interest to meeting you again. I know that you will have many who desire to speak with you, but I shall consider your convenience as much as I can.

With kindest regards,

Yours sincerely,

John McConnachie.
