Dear Sir:

I am writing you at the suggestion of Mr. Hessel in connection with a translation of Dr. Barth's "Credo". The translation has been done by the Rev. Dr. Kuwata and is to be published by our organization. During the past seven or eight years we have published a number of translations of English and American books and in every case the authors and publishers of these volumes have agreed to the publication of Japanese translations without any financial conditions. It is our hope that your Company will be generous enough to permit us to publish this translation of Dr. Barth's book also without conditions. I need hardly add that the publication of Christian books in Japan is always a hazardous enterprise at best, and this is particularly true of translations. Generally speaking foreign publishers of religious books recognise this and therefore permit the publication of their copyrights without imposing upon Japanese publishers the obligation of paying royalties. I shall be very glad if you will write me at an early date since Dr. Kuwata has practically finished his translation and we shall therefore wish to proceed with the publication of the translation as soon as we hear from you.

Very truly yours,

Arthur Jorgensen
